1. Entity-Relationship Diagram

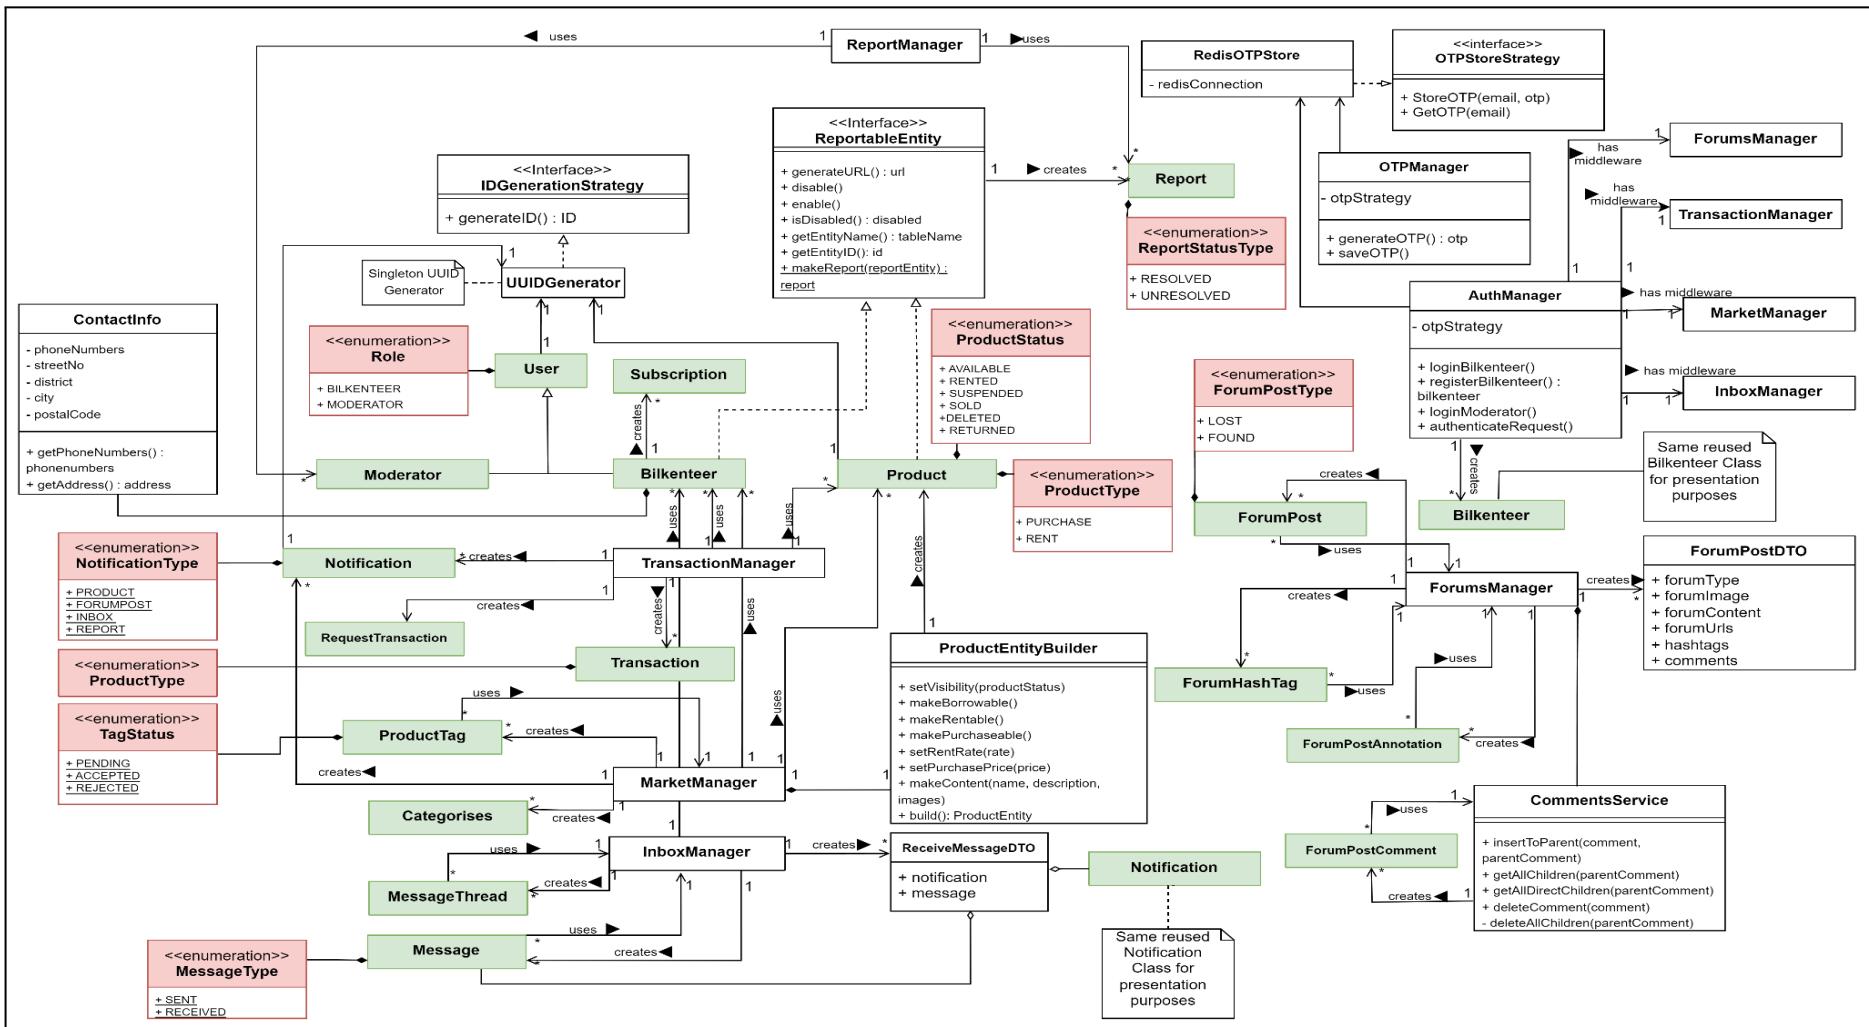

2. Class Diagram

2.1 Class Definitions

2.2 Class Relationships

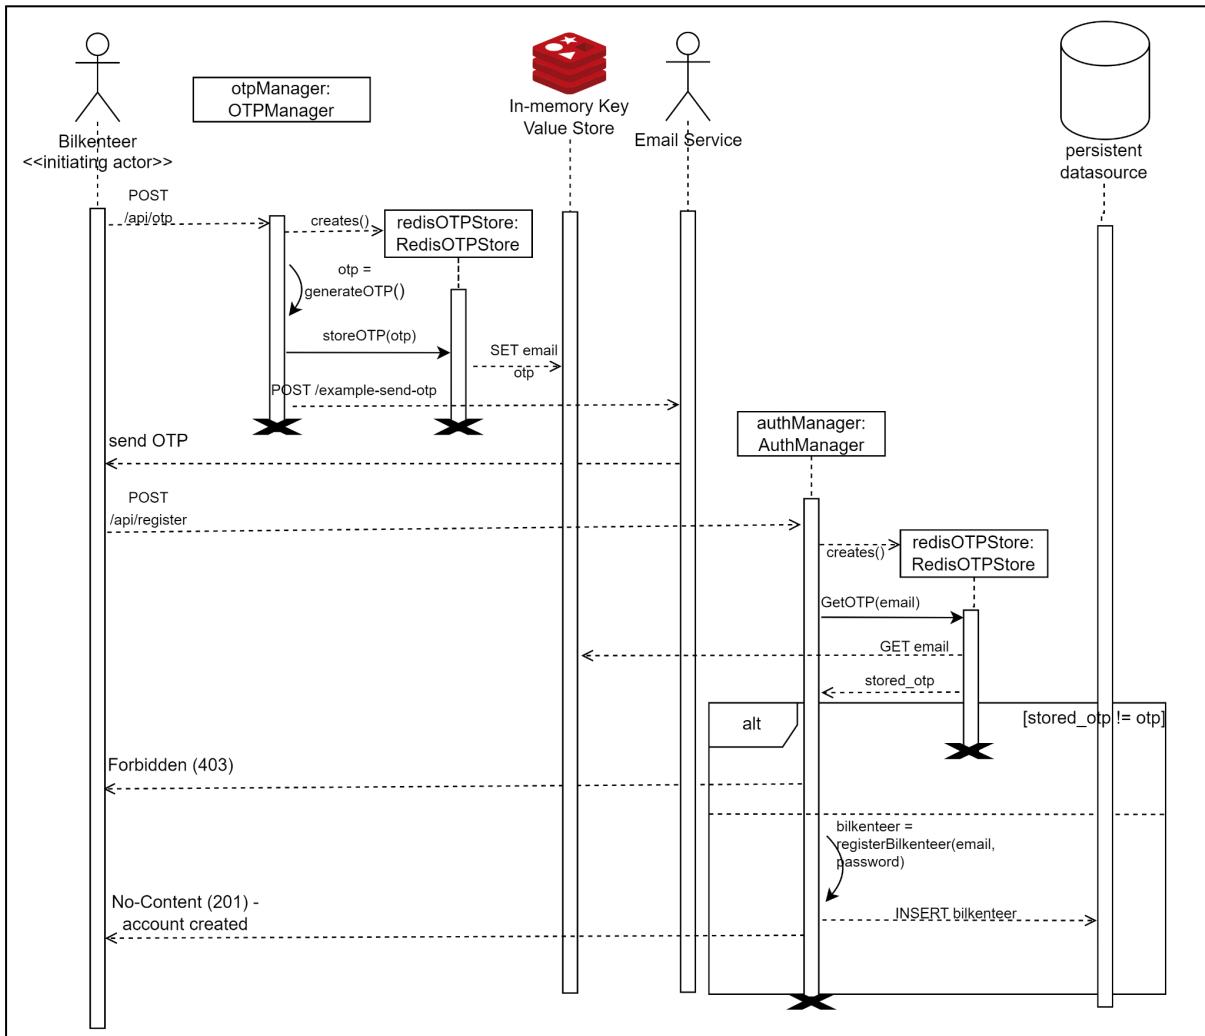

- The directed association with the relationship name 'has middleware' means that the methods on the directed-to managers have the AuthManager as a middleware. All requests routed to the respective managers require the method authenticateRequest of the Authmanager first.
- The directed association with the relationship name 'creates' means that the directed-from manager is responsible for creating new entities of the other class. The multiplicity 1 to many means that a manager can create multiple entities in the data source
- The directed association with the relationship name 'uses' means that the managers use the directed-to entity (the green color-coded classes) to make requests to the data source
- All associations without the multiplicities mean a 1 to 1 relationship
- The association between entity classes and the UUIDGenerator ensures that the strategy to be used by the entity to generate IDs uses UUID
- The notation to add relationship names on associations was retrieved from <https://www.visual-paradigm.com/guide/uml-unified-modeling-language/what-is-class-diagram/>

3. Sequence Diagrams

3.1 Account Registration Sequence Diagram

Scenario: New Account Registration

The Bilkenteer initiates the process with a POST request to the OTPManager, which creates an OTP through the RedisOTPStore and stores it in an in-memory key-value store. This OTP is then sent to the BilkentUser's email by the Email Service. Next, the Bilkenteer sends the OTP back to the system through a POST request to validate it. The AuthManager retrieves the OTP from RedisOTPStore, and if the provided OTP matches the stored one, the Bilkenteer is allowed to proceed with the registration by making a POST request to `/api/register`. If the OTP is correct, the AuthManager creates an account (`registerBilkenteer`) in the persistent data source, and a successful response (No-Content 201) is returned, indicating the account creation. If the OTP doesn't match, a Forbidden (403) error is returned, denying the registration.

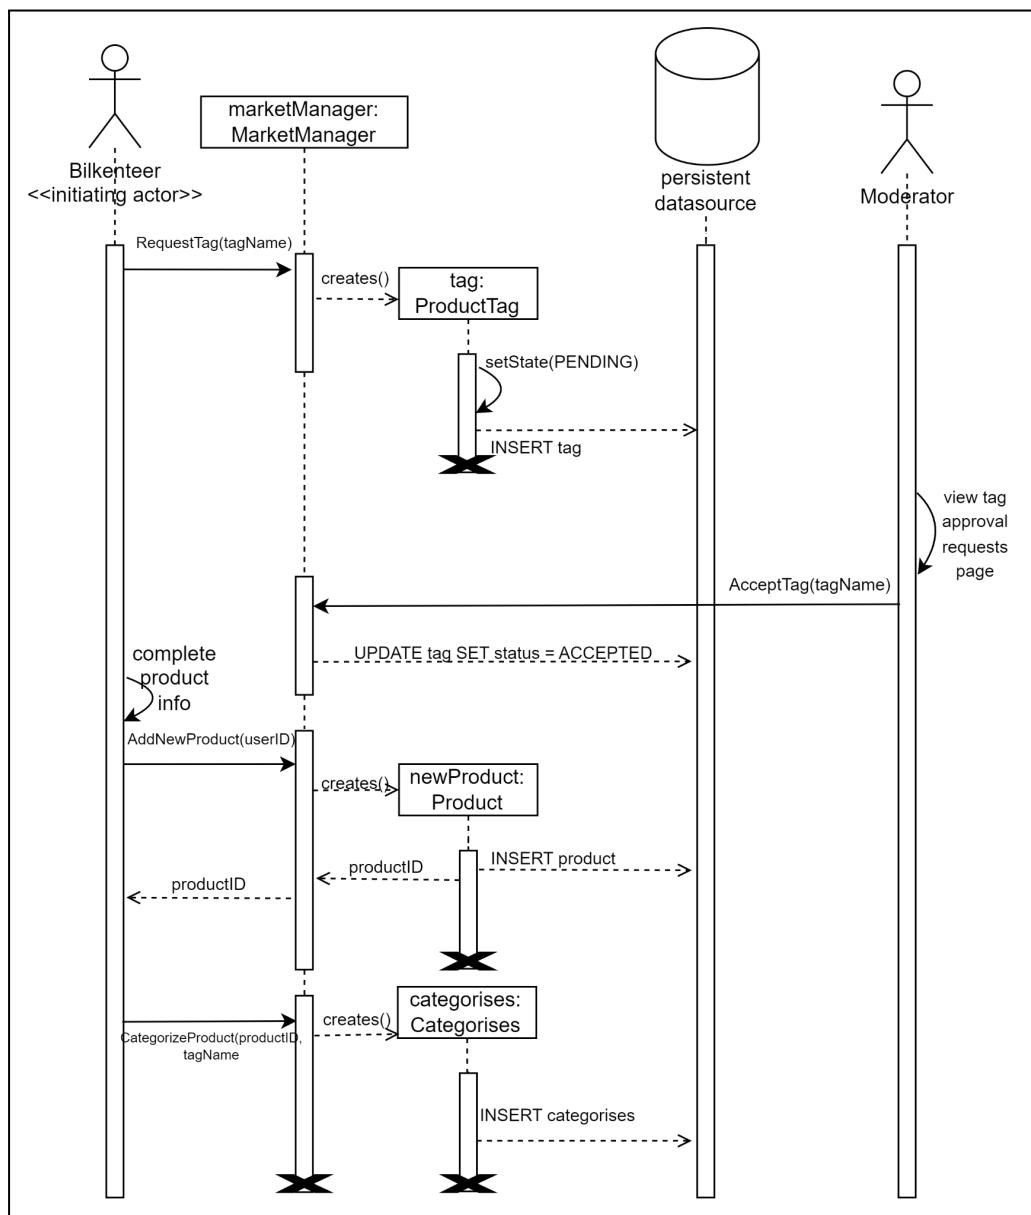

NOTE: All Insertion to the persistent data source calls the `generateID()` method of the `UUIDGenerator` singleton or an equivalent ID generation strategy. All interactions with the data sources are depicted through pseudo-queries.

3.2 Product Upload with New Tag Approval

Scenario: Uploading a product with new tag approval.

A Bilkenteer initiates the process by requesting to add a new tag through the MarketManager. The MarketManager creates a ProductTag, sets its state to PENDING, and then inserts the tag into the persistent data source. Meanwhile, a Moderator views the tag approval requests on a separate interface. Upon approval of the tag by the Moderator (using the AcceptTag action), the MarketManager updates the tag's state to ACCEPTED. The Bilkenteer then completes the product information and calls the MarketManager to add the new product, which creates a Product instance and inserts it into the database. Finally, the MarketManager creates a Categorises instance, which categorizes the product with the new tag, and this categorization is also inserted into the database.

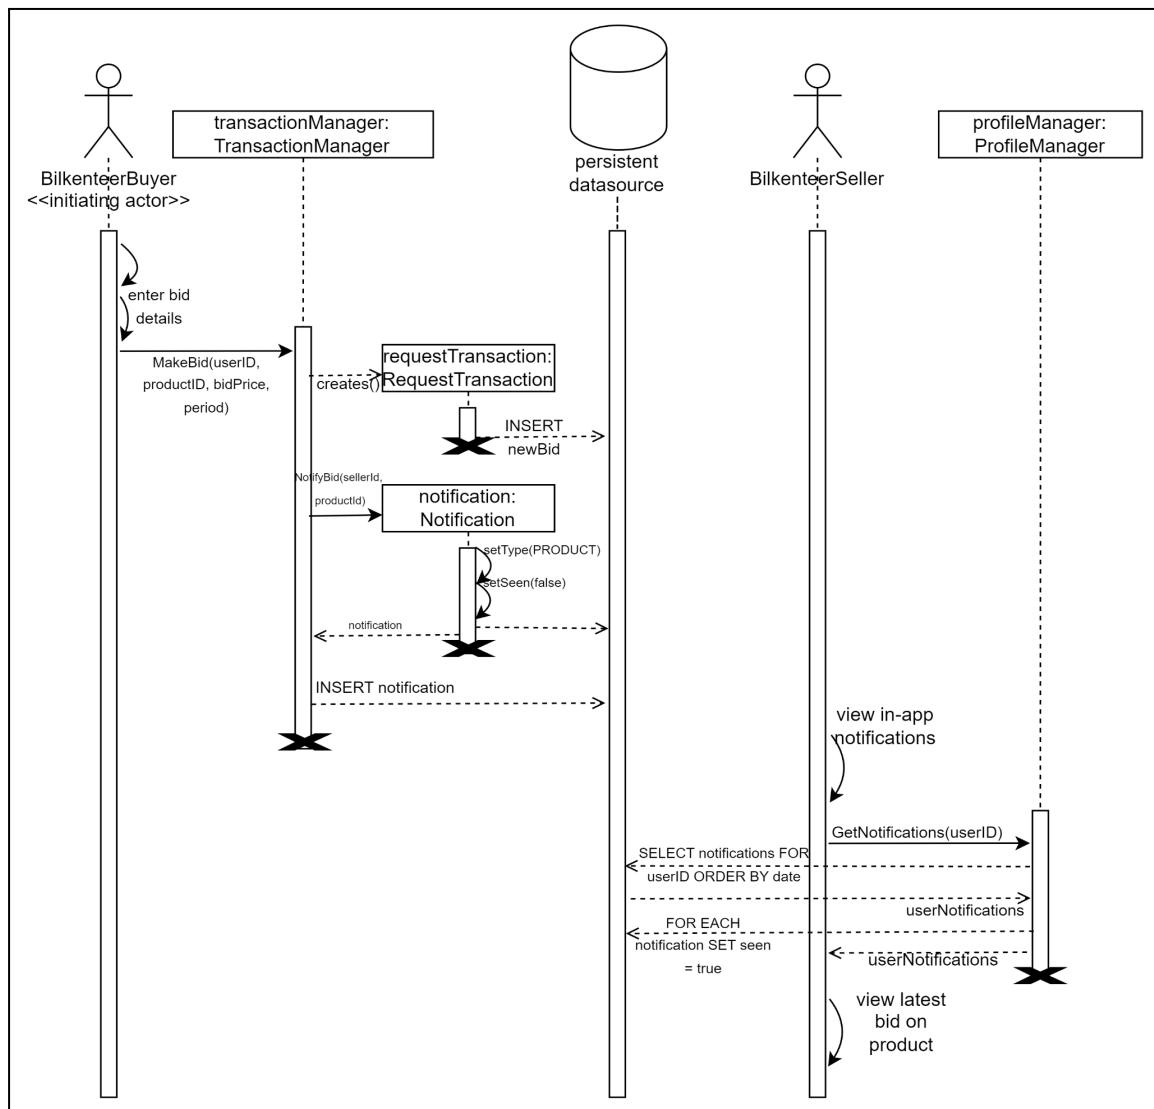

3.3 Bid Placement on Product and Notification to Seller

Scenario: Bid placement on a product by the buyer and notification to the seller

The BilkenteerBuyer initiates the process by entering bid details and invoking the MakeBid function of the TransactionManager, which creates a RequestTransaction. This transaction is then inserted into the persistent data source. Simultaneously, a Notification instance is created with the type set to PRODUCT and seen status set to false, which is then inserted into the persistent data source.

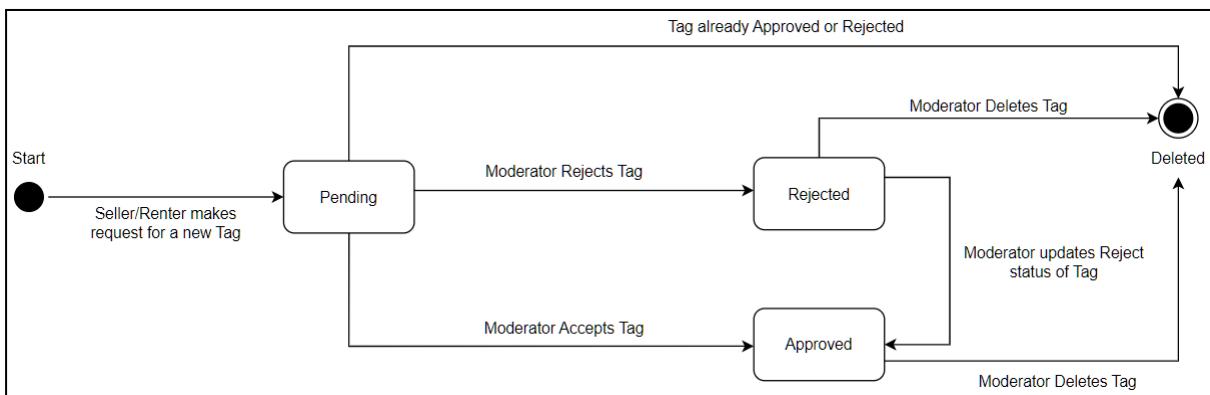

Following this, the ProfileManager for the BilkenteerSeller retrieves notifications by executing a SELECT query on the persistent data source to fetch notifications ordered by date where the seen status is false. For each notification, the seen status is updated to true. The BilkenteerSeller uses the ProfileManager to view in-app notifications and the latest bid on the product, which completes the bid placement and notification process.

4. State Diagrams

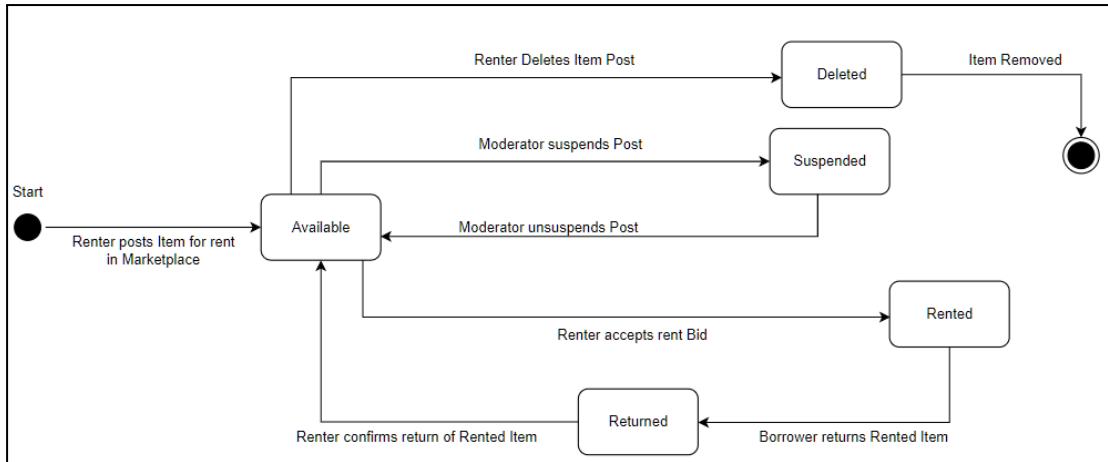

4.1 Tag Approval Workflow:

- It begins when a seller/renter requests a new tag, setting the process to a “Pending” state.
- The moderator can either accept or reject the tag.
 - If the tag is accepted, it moves to an “Approved” state. The moderator can also delete an approved tag, moving it to the “Deleted” state.
 - If the tag is rejected, it moves to a “Rejected” state. The moderator then has the option to update the tag’s rejection status further. The moderator can then delete the tag, which transitions it to a “Deleted” state.
- The “Deleted” state is the final state for a tag, meaning it is removed from the system, and the process ends.

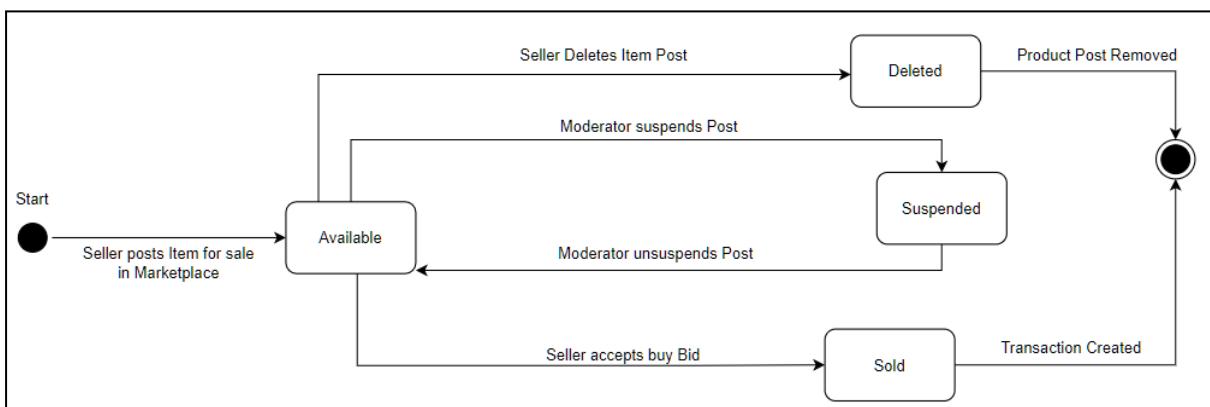

4.2 Rental Item Workflow:

- It starts when a renter posts an item for rent, marking it as “Available.”
- The item can then transition through several states:
 - If the renter accepts a rent bid, the item state changes to “Rented.”
 - The renter or a moderator can delete or suspend the post, moving it to “Deleted” or “Suspended” states, respectively.
 - If the borrower returns the item, the state changes to “Returned.”
- A moderator can unsuspend a post, returning it to “Available.”

4.3 Selling Item Workflow:

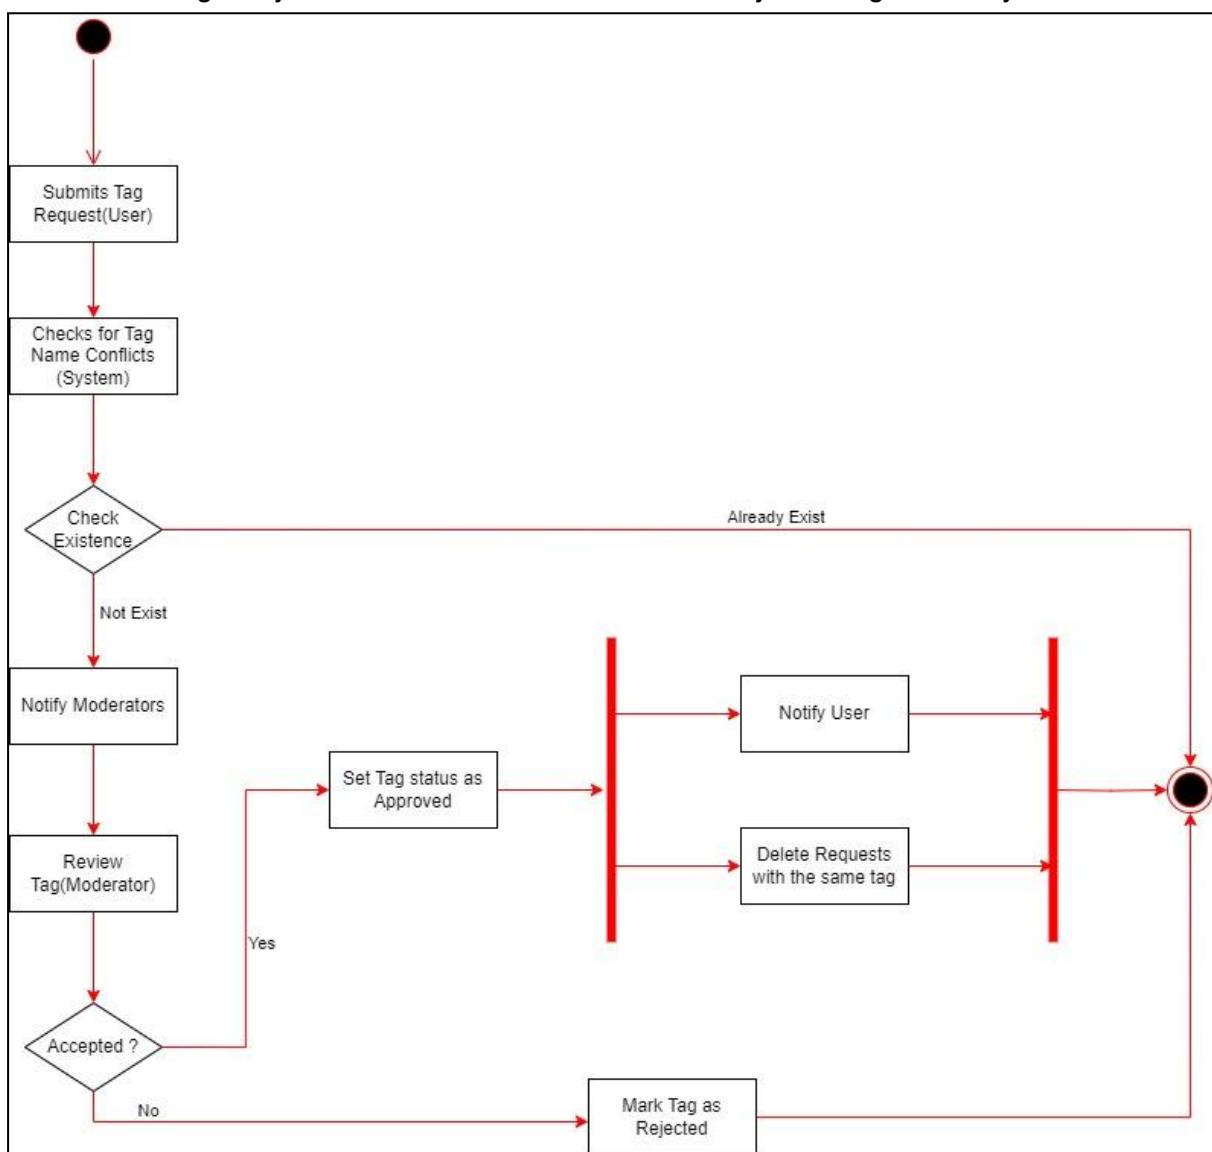

- The process initiates when a seller posts an item for rent or sale, making it "Available."
- The post can be deleted or suspended by the seller or a moderator, respectively, leading to "Deleted" or "Suspended" states.
- If the seller accepts a buy bid, the item state changes to "Sold," creating a transaction.

5. Activity Diagrams

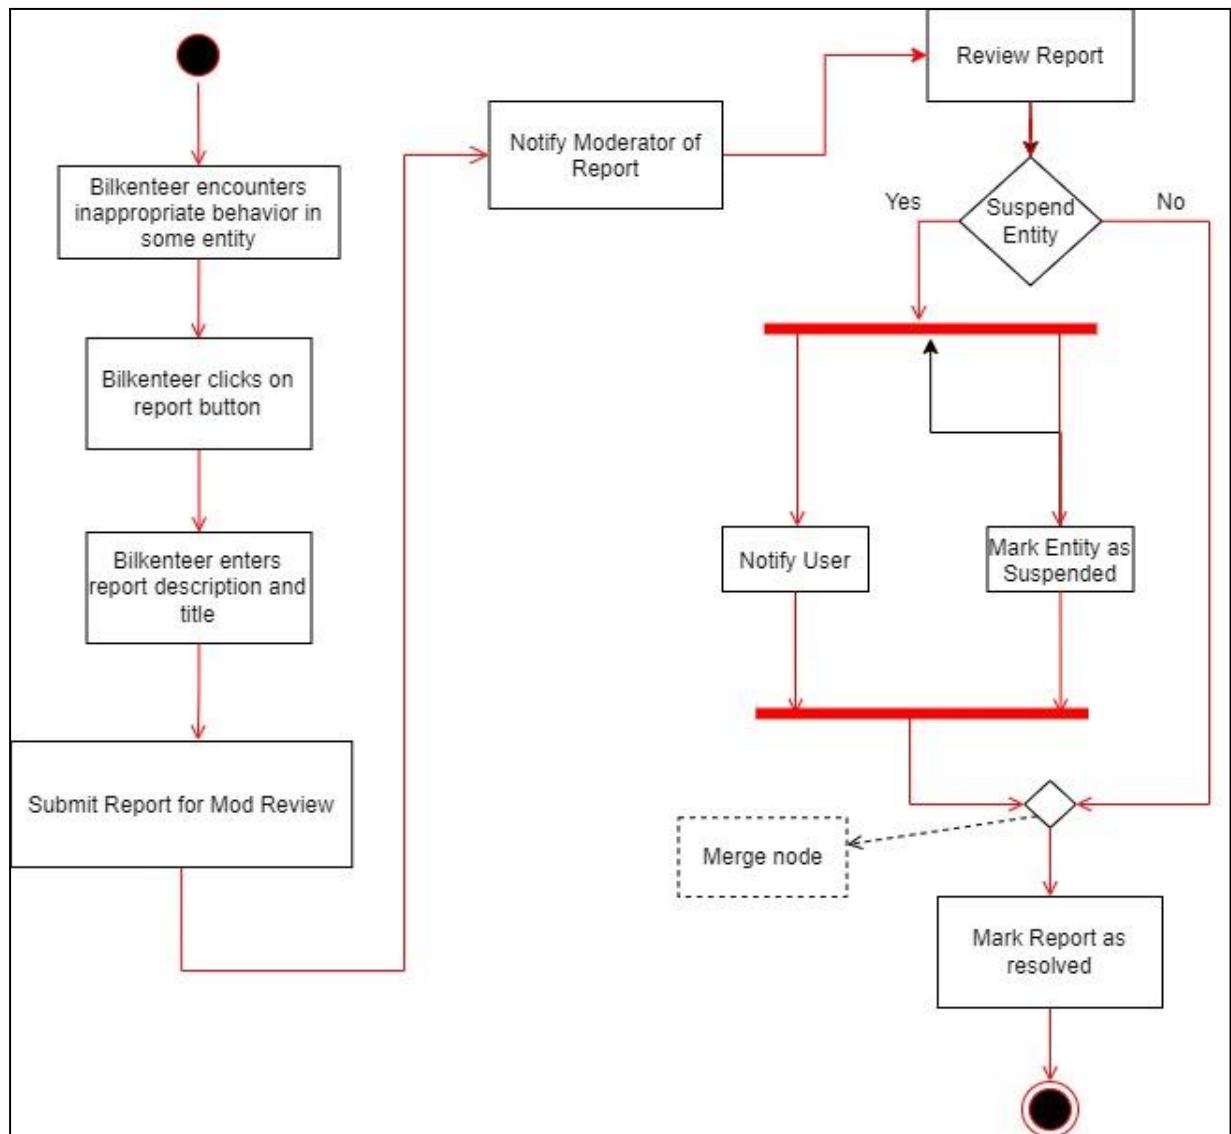

5.1 Tag Approval Activity

- Submission of a tag initiates the activity.
- The system verifies tag uniqueness to prevent duplication. This includes its existence in accepted or rejected tags list.
- Moderators receive a prompt notification about the new tag request.
- If the tag is approved:
 - The requester receives a confirmation notification.
 - The system automatically deletes any duplicate requests for the approved tag.
- If the tag is rejected, it will be added to the list of rejected tags in the system.

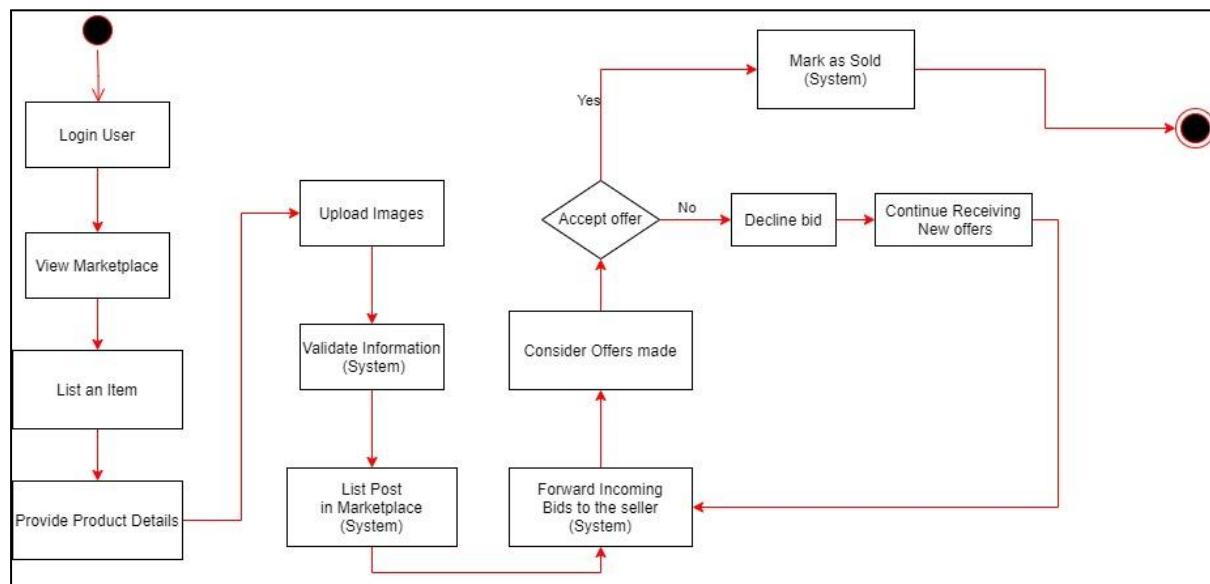

5.2 Report Activity

- Submission of a report initiates the activity.
- Users can report other users, comments and specific forum/product posts.
- The system promptly forwards report details to moderators.
- Moderators have the authority to:
 - Suspend the relevant user.
 - Delete the flagged post/comment.
- The relevant user will be informed of the suspension/deletion.

5.3 Selling Activity

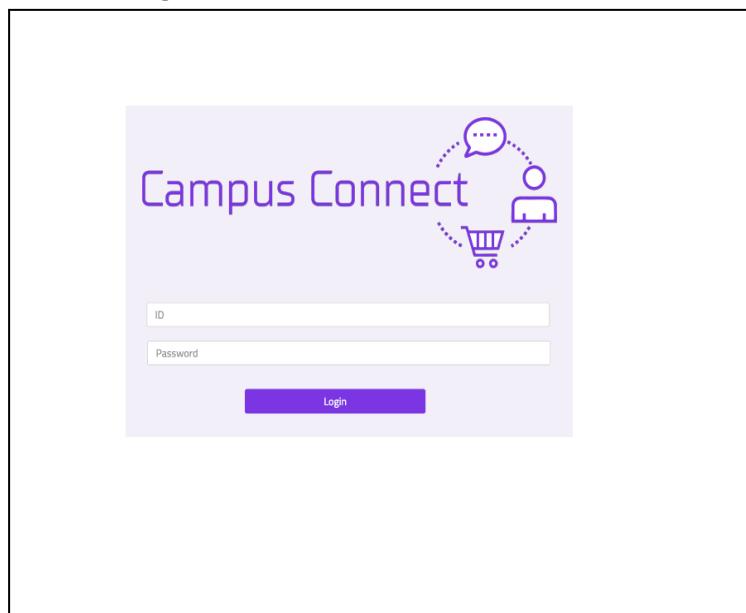

- Users initiate the selling process by clicking "List an Item" in the marketplace
- Users must have detailed product information and accompanying images during the listing process.
- The system verifies the provided information and actively displays the item on the marketplace.
- Incoming bids from potential buyers are forwarded to the seller by the system.
- Upon acceptance of an offer, the user prompts the system to designate the product as "sold" in the marketplace. Alternatively, the user can decline an offer, instructing the system to redirect new offers for consideration.
